

THE STORY OF THE DEL-MI DISTRICT PATCH

PREFACE

The Miami Indians ruled an area roughly extending eastward to Detroit and Cincinnati, and to the Great Lakes and the junction of the Wabash and Ohio Rivers westward. The Delaware Indians lived in an area that is now the state of Delaware; and their name was derived from an early Governor of that colony, Lord De La Warr. The advancing white settlers forced the Delawares west, and in the early 1800's, the Miamis agreed to let the Delawares have all the land watered by the White River.

SEPTEMBER 1972

After much discussion, the Big Caribou and Prairie Valley Districts decided to merge. The name selected for the new district is a contraction of the Delaware and Miami Indian tribes.

DEL-MI

The district patch, designed by Irv Brengle, tells the Del-Mi story in authentic Miami pictographs around the outer border. The heads represent a Miami Indian wearing a roach of long porcupine guard hairs and a Delaware Indian with braided hair. A fluff is at the base of the feather. Beginning at left center above the square and following the pictographs to the square on the right, the story is as follows:

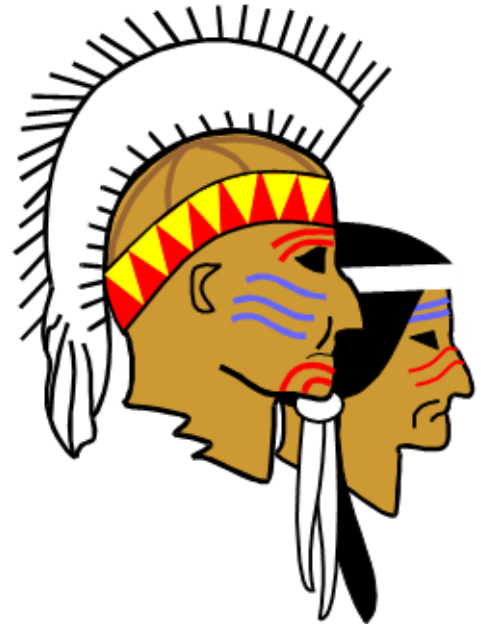

"Many Scouters – from Big Caribou – and Prairie Valley – talked – morning, noon and night – and decided to become of one tribe."

Following from below the left square around the bottom of the patch, the story continues:

"This new tribe – will have many campouts – many campfires – and will walk many trails – during the Snow Moon – the Grass Moon – the Hunt Moon – and the Falling Leaf Moon."
